

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Brooklyn's grand old man, Winton Danielson, who will be 101 years of age November 15, participated in the voting in that town on Tuesday and possibly was the oldest citizen to cast a ballot, if not the oldest in the state.

Mr. Danielson was taken in a motor car from his home on the West Side to the polling place in East Brooklyn. His wife, Mrs. Danielson, accompanied him. He was accompanied by his son, E. H. Danielson, in marking the ballot, but otherwise he got along very well and seemed to be interested in the exercise of once more casting a ballot in an election of such widespread interest.

Mr. Danielson could not definitely recall Tuesday afternoon for whom his first ballot was cast in a presidential election, though it would appear from the date of his birth and the record of elections that it was James Knox Polk, elected in 1845. Mr. Danielson does not remember very clearly, however, and recalled the fact on Tuesday, of hearing crowds cheering for Andrew Jackson. This was when Mr. Danielson was a little boy and he was waiting for his father to get home from work. He also remembers the Martin Van Buren election in 1837 and that of William Henry Harrison in 1840. Since the organization of the republican party Mr. Danielson has voted for its candidates and added his bit to helping the party in the voting of Tuesday. In addition to experiencing falling eyelids, Mr. Danielson also is a bit deaf. He gets about his home and out about the grounds and bids fair to live well beyond his 101st birthday, now only a little more than two weeks away.

Edna Sheldon Blair of Washington, D. C., addressing a republican rally in the town hall on the eve of election, included in her remarks some comment relative to independent voters that attracted the ire of some who heard her. Being an independent, as one might gather from what she had to say about this group of voters, is one degree from being nothing.

Blind allegiance and dumb obedience to party programs and party discipline were set forth as the speaker's viewpoint of what constitutes good citizenship insofar as it applies to exercising the right of franchise. A thoroughly Franchised electorate was set up as Mrs. Blair's ideal. No individual thought or liberty of action should enter into one's action, but only unswerving affiliation with some established party, preferably the republican.

It so happens that a great many of Killingly's citizens, as elsewhere throughout the country, are in complete disagreement with Mrs. Blair's viewpoint as to this. These voters, who chafe at nothing to anyone in thorough Americanism, are not yet ready to assume their rights or viewpoints as voters to any party or set of leaders, much after the manner that one might see a parcel of real estate with an agent for disposal, and it seems proper that expression should be given to this fact at this time.

Independent voters at least think for themselves. They do not accept their opinions ready made. This may seem wholly reprehensible to such an ardent supporter as Mrs. Blair, but it is a fact nevertheless and recognition of it may be profitable to those who, like Mrs. Blair, would by ridicule attempt to stigmatize them from any other source in public than to do his bidding, whatever penalty obedience might entail.

Notwithstanding the best efforts of party managers to get out as close as possible to 100 per cent of the voting strength of the town in Tuesday's election this was not accomplished. There were many that did not vote, although the stay-at-home did not number as heavy a percentage of the total vote of the town as was the case in the town election in October. There were many Democratic weather such as that of Tuesday is commonly described on election day did not bring desired results for that party in Putnam. It appears that the modern generation of republicans is as weak as the democratic craze and were out in force to take part in the election. In a measure this was chiefly due to the fact that the democratic vote had been unusually active throughout this district this fall and the republican campaign directors were stirred to real activity.

Despite the bad weather upwards of 1,800 votes out of a total of 2,565 on the voting list had been cast up to 4:30 p. m. when it was forecasted that the total before the polls closed would reach to or over 3,000.

While there appears to have been more or less uncertainty among republican leaders as to what might happen to some of their candidates, the opposite optimism that might be expected among the democratic leaders was absent, and some of them were conceding early in the day that they could not hope to overcome the normal republican strength in Putnam, although complimentary votes were anticipated for some who were on the democratic ticket.

Both party organizations were active in getting out the vote, and careful checks were kept throughout the day that it might be known who had voted and who had not.

Here in Putnam there was particular interest in the outcome of the voting for state treasurer, because G. Harold Gilpatrick of this city was the republican candidate, and in the result of the contest for sheriff, Putnam also having a favorite son in this race in the person of John G. Fox, the democratic candidate.

Tuesday morning the funeral of Mrs. Agnes May Gagne, 17, wife of Len Gagne, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Tetreault, was held with services at St. Mary's church. Rev. Charles F. Bedard being celebrant. The high mass of requiem, attended by a large number of relatives and friends. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

A purchase agreement has been executed and deeds recorded transferring 22 acres of land south of the city from the property of Edward M. Harris to the city of Putnam. Negotiations for the purchase of this property began many weeks ago, but the purpose for which the city wished to acquire the property was not until recently that the city was able to obtain the property. The property is now being used for a city dump.

It now develops that the principal object of the city had in mind when it started out to acquire the property was to provide, among other things, a site for a city dump. There has been constant recurring complaints during the past few years over the odors that have arisen from the present city dump and no little difficulty with fires originating within the dump has been experienced.

Only a portion of the newly purchased property will be required for dumping purposes and the land is not likely that any further advantages will be caused residents because of the dump.

Only a small portion of the 22 acres will be required for dumping purposes. The remainder of the land may be utilized as seems best, and suggestion already heard is that a municipal swimming pool can easily be developed there and at small expense. A stream of water that runs through the property can so be controlled as to create the desired pool. There is also a quantity of good standing timber on the city's newly purchased land that is valuable and at some time may be used to advantage.

A possibility as the result of the city buying and the other land owned by the city on School street north of Providence street, may be disposed of, as of no further value to Putnam. This last mentioned property has possibilities as a site for some manufacturing concern.

Eugene Cartier, 18, of this city, one of the first to become involved in difficulties this season with the game wardens. Cartier, with another youth, was accosted recently while hunting in the town of Killingly and asked by Deputy Warden F. N. Kies to show his hunting license. Cartier told the officer that he had forgotten his license and was told that he might send the number of it to Mr. Kies and no more would be heard about the matter. Failing to hear from Cartier within a reasonable time, Mr. Kies investigated further and found that Cartier had not taken out a license. Cartier thereupon was ordered into the town court of Killingly and fined, but he was shown leniency and the fine was rebated, he paying only the actual costs.

The newest proposal for regulating Putnam's constantly growing automobile traffic is to make Livery street a one-way thoroughfare. It was stated Tuesday that such a proposal will be submitted to the coming meeting of the common council for consideration. The plan in favor of the plan is that it would relieve congestion in this business street in the heart of the city.

On the other hand, the proposal already is meeting with opposition and the council is likely to hear considerable about the matter before a decision is reached. Those opposed hold that a one-way street there would be too much of a restriction and inconvenience for many that if any traffic regulation is ordered for Livery street it should simply be confining parking to one side of the street.

There was convincing evidence Tuesday evening that great numbers of people have not lost their interest in elections and the results of them. Where returns were available, there were people gathered in Putnam. The public was fortunate in being able to get announcements direct from special wires. For the benefit of their members the Putnam lodge of Elks provided returns and there was also a social session.

What promised to be a serious disappointment for members of the American Legion in carrying out their Armistice Day programme appears to have been turned into a happy change. The Melody Man orchestra was booked for the Legion dance Saturday night, but cancellation of the engagement forced the Legion members to look for another orchestra. Wattle's of New Haven being obtained.

Brick work is now being done on the addition to the Israel Putnam school. It was stated Tuesday by a member of the town school committee that it is probable that the laying of brick will continue for several weeks more and there is a possibility the walls will be up before real winter weather sets in.

Mrs. Harriet M. Rose of Bridge street will have the members of the Ladies Aid society of the Baptist church at her home for a sewing meeting this (Wednesday) afternoon and Mrs. O. D. Farrow will be in charge.

Judge Clarence M. Child of Woodstock, republican candidate for senator in the 28th district, made his closing speech of the campaign at a rally in Danielson Monday evening.

Raymond Johnson has been elected president of the Athletic association of the Tourtellotte Memorial High School at North Grovesville for 1922-1923. The old-time voter who used to be about to be handed some consideration for either external or internal reward the picking hard if he was about to fall during Tuesday's election. Things were not done as they used to be in this part of New England.

St. Phillips' guild has a social event planned for the latter part of this month.

One of the four Liberty engines which propelled the navy seaplane NC-4 on its epoch-making trans-Atlantic flight in May 1913, is being displayed at the exhibit in the National museum at Washington.

ANNOUNCEMENTS
McEnelly's Singing Orchestra.

Works of masters of literature have been paraphrased for many years but it is only comparatively recently that the themes of famous composers have been woven into dance music. It has remained for Edwin J. McEnelly and his associates of McEnelly's Singing Orchestra to do this without detracting from the art of the creators of the finest selections known to the musical world.

When McEnelly's Singing Orchestra appears in the Armory on Thursday evening, it will introduce many interpolations drawn from the scores of leading composers. These may be more interesting to some than the complete selections. Sometimes the work of the original composer stands out clearly at other times it is subdued, but those who dance to the music of McEnelly's orchestra are sure not only to hear all that is latest Irish Regiment Band Coming to Broadway Sunday.

When the Irish Regiment band is heard in this city in one of the few concerts to be given in the United States during its first tour here, one of the features will be Pipe-Major John Trumbone, who is an expert performer on the Irish harp, is to give forth tunes which have never been written down because of tonal peculiarities. These cannot be recorded by existing methods of notation. These tunes the traditional Irish fiddlers and pipers preserved since the earliest historic times in Ireland, handing them down from generation to generation. They are tunes which the moving spirits of the Irish musical revival hope to use in the creation of a new Irish art music. Herbert Hughes, the British critic, who visited this country during the past season, has devoted several years to investigating the origin and history of such tunes.

It will be seen at the Broadway theatre on Sunday night, Nov. 12, other features and novelties in conjunction with modern and old Irish tunes by the band. A colossal festival of music is assured to those who come.

Mail orders received now. Tickets go on sale Thursday morning at the Broadway theatre box office. Reserve yours early.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Publicity—Patina Price
One of the seasons most important announcements in the post-war readjustment of prices is the news that the price of Patina cigarettes has returned to 25 cents for twenty.

Smokers and others alike have naturally waited for Patina, as the quality leader of the "Turkish Blend" type of cigarette, to give the most authentic indication of the trend of cigarette prices, so that this announcement, just made by the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., is perhaps the most authoritative development since the price-cutting movement among the cheaper brands was started some months ago.

At Patina's price, it is difficult to imagine the smoker who cannot afford to be discriminating, for after all it is doubtful if there is another cigarette on the market that is so good as Patina. It is a fact, in fact, the claim is made and justified repeatedly in ever-increasing sales, that there is "no other cigarette of such quality at such a price."

It is in the opinion of the writer, that Patina still sells for a few cents more than the ordinary Turkish blend cigarette, but the slightly higher price is more than compensated for by the extra amount of Turkish tobacco used in its blending, which gives the cigarette its famous "balance"—that rich aroma balanced with body, that smoothness and delicacy of flavor that have set Patina apart since the first from all other cigarettes.

Breed Theatre
One of the most delightful screen offerings of the year is "The Five Dollar Baby," starring the charming "Toots" Dana, which is the feature attraction at the Breed theatre today and tomorrow.

It is a screen version by Metro of Irvin S. Cobb's story, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, and is provided to be a delightfully human photograph of life in New York's Ghetto. Harry Beaumont directed the film.

Miss Dana was never more mirth-provoking than in her new role. As a rough and ready child of thirteen, brought up by a Jewish pawnbroker, she is highly amusing in the earlier scenes of the play. She is constantly involved in some lively incidents or other, with the people of the East Side, all of whom are remarkably fine types.

The story is that of a baby who is abandoned and picked up by a hobo, who saves her for five dollars. The pawnbroker, who boasts that he "lends money on anything," decides to rear the child himself. When, eighteen years later, he is asked to surrender her to the man who pawned her, he contrives a means of avoiding the performance of his obligation.

Rex Taylor adapted the story for the screen. John Arnold photographed it. R. F. Mann was art and technical director.

For the second feature L. J. Gansner's spectacular flood drama "The Call of Home" will be shown. This is an adaptation of the novel "Home" by George Agnew Chamberlain and is presented by an all-star cast. Movie Chats completes the bill.

Not Far to Picture Palace to Disclose Remarkable Scenes Concerning Big Production at Broadway.

Absorbingly interesting from the opening scene to the final "climax" and with a climax that brought the audience half out of the seats is "The Oath," the B. A. Walsh production featuring Miriam Cooper, which opened at the Broadway theatre yesterday for a run of two days. After one has seen the reason is apparent as to why the veteran motion picture exhibitor who composes the executive council of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., selected it to be one of its first group of Big Five productions to be offered to the public.

Miriam Cooper offers a characterization in the role of Minna Hart that has seldom been equalled. Conway Tearle as the impetuous lawyer, is splendid while Anna Q. Nilsson as the original love of the two chums, and Henry Chase as the successful wooer of her, give performances worthy of the great stars they have replaced.

Seeing "The Oath" is time well and profitably spent.

A very funny Hal Roach comedy follows.

De Mille's "Nice People" at Strand Theatre.

What may happen to the modern young girl in her pursuit of pleasure at any cost, is vividly portrayed in William de Mille's latest Paramount Picture, "Nice People," which will be shown at the Strand theatre for three days, beginning Thursday.

The producer has achieved the unique distinction of presenting a vital problem of today in a manner that is entertaining, amusing and artistically perfect.

Rachel Crothers' play, of the same name, furnished the theme for Mr. de Mille's picture. The play is a comedy, and the producer has adapted the story for the screen, followed the original play in most important matters while adding several valuable scenes, sequences which the limitations of the stage forbade in the original story.

The story of "Nice People" has to do with a modern girl who resents the sudden assertion of parental authority. In a fit of pique she finds herself accidentally in a seemingly compromising situation. The other man does not always understand but the girl does a right about face that brings happiness in the end, but only after some trying experiences for the young woman.

You will enjoy "Nice People." And if you are young or have youthful daughters, sisters or other relatives, you will do well to take them with you.

A real comedy riot is featured in the Educational-Christie comedy, "That Son of a Sheik." Also a News will be shown.
